From the Georgia Chamber of Commerce: "FREEDOM" is a stirring and penetrating tribute to American soldiers, from the Minute Men to the 48th Brigade, captured on canvas by renowned Georgia artist, Steve Penley. Penley is considered a master at capturing historical icons. His work, "Freedom", depicts soldiers in the foreground in combat surrounding a statue that pays tribute to the first Americans to take up arms to defend freedom on U.S. soil, the Minute Men. A proud Georgia State flag appears in the painting to acknowledge the sacrifices made by members of the 48th Brigade, a largely Georgia force, who served in Iraq.

The Iraq connection is subtle, but obvious. As part of the montage, an Iraqi woman confidently displays the purple dye on her finger, evidence that she took part in an open and free election, an exercise that some proud Georgians gave their lives to defend. In the background is a haunting reminder of the repression that existed in the country before Americans came to their aid.

The original painting is part of the Georgia Power Company's gallery in Atlanta. Reproductions of the original, signed by the artist, are available from the Foundation.
